In the ever-evolving field of public health, effective leadership is crucial for driving change, addressing emerging challenges, and advancing health outcomes for communities. This event, Leadership in Public Health: Introduction to the Theory and Practice aims to empower public health professionals with the skills, knowledge, and strategies needed to lead effectively in this dynamic environment.

OBJECTIVES

- Gain insights into the unique challenges and opportunities of leading public health initiatives, including managing diverse teams, navigating political and organisational landscapes, and responding to public health crises.
- Explore strategies for building and maintaining partnerships with various organisations, including governmental agencies, non-profits, and community groups, to enhance collective impact.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

- Mid-level public health physicians.
- Trainee public health physicians.
- MO and allied health professionals in public health services or interested in public health leadership.
- Manager/coordinator of public health programme/activities by NGOs and Civil Societies.
